Introduction

Based on 1st Samuel 16:7, and Matthew 25:31-46, this book critically and also satirically examines this often used statement that I've heard people who don't come to church use, as an excuse why they don't attend church, as well as Christians who believe these four words can be used to cover up sin, and also to try and excuse their lack of good works, thinking that as long as they continue to do good, and come to church, they'll be just fine.

God Knows My Heart Inside Out is a glaring look at this often loosely used statement that seems to have run amok in the world of unbelievers, but more sadly, even in God's family of saints in the Body of Christ. This book also breaks down the scripture Jeremiah 17:9 that says, "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: who can know it?"
